

TOMAS BATA UNIVERSITY IN ZLÍN, CZECH REPUBLIC

Brief History of TBU:

Tomas Bata University in Zlín (TBU) was established as of 1 January 2001, but first students were already studying here as early as in 1960. In that year a branch of the Slovak University of Technology was founded in Zlín, at which mainly chemical technology and engineering technology were taught. Nine years later, in 1969, the local constituent part was operating here as an independent Faculty of Technology of the Brno University of Technology.

TBU is a university comprising six faculties offering courses in technology, economics, humanities, arts and health care. The University has been named after the entrepreneur Thomas Bata (1876–1932) who was also the originator of the shoe industry in Zlín.
